

To whom it may concern,

Squip, a company that specializes in making custom figurines of video game characters, has a line of Mega Man products I think you and your readers might be interested in.

As the video game industry continues to diversify due to ever-growing genres of games, fans from all different corners of the gaming community are joining together to share in the excitement of the variety of Squip's product line. The company's unique customizability in their figurines is setting them apart from competitors, and is making waves in the gaming community as fans get to customize their character in a multitude of ways to fit their personal aesthetic.

Please let me know if you are able to feature any of Squip's products or share this information with your readers. I can also put you in contact with Squip's media team if you need photo selections or sample products to feature. Please contact me if you have any additional accommodations or requests!

Sincerely,
Megan Perry